We would like to thank all of those who supported us in putting this together. Appreciation goes out to Dr. and Mrs. William Sears who met with us for dinner to discuss the book idea. Thank you Mr. Scott Dunphy for the encouragement and humor and for reviewing advanced copies. Seattle Midwifery School was significant in teaching us about the whole realm of childbirth in America. Dr. Mary Ann Armenteros was a major help by believing in natural childbirth as a choice and midwifery as a solution. It is often said that when the pupil is ready the teacher shall appear, and for Genny that could not be truer. We wish to express our gratitude to Genny's foremost teacher and mentor Karen Baker, LM. Karen has made in surmountable contributions both to the worlds of midwifery and midwifery education. She is both a sterling midwife and an exemplary teacher of midwives. Karen, thank you for all the lessons you taught. Our family deserves praise for putting up with us and learning more about birth than kids should know at any age, thank you Julia, Corban, Jacob, and Isaiah White. To Joanne Myers-Ciecko thanks for providing information relevant to the topic and to Leslie Butterfield for being an inspiration and mentor. We would like to thank Patty Brumbaugh, CNM posthumous for her visionary work in midwifery and for all she meant to us personally as well as to others in her pioneering work in facilitating and assisting families to have vaginal births after a previous cesarean experience. We would like to thank Dr. James and Cathy Brodsky for all their tireless work to improve the health and healthcare in our community. We would like to say thank you to Gwen Wessells, whose passion for nutritional excellence is both contagious and inspiring. Also we would like to thank Therese Charvet for her leadership and professionalism by role modeling equity and tolerance. We express gratitude to all the authors of all the books from which we read and studied as you paved the way for us and opened our heart and minds to the need for men to be better educated on the topic.
